

Alexandria Gazette

FRIDAY EVENING, APRIL 16.

A MAINE MAN OF THE OLD SCHOOL.—Aaron McKenney, of Saco, died a few weeks since, aged 102 years. Up to a few weeks before his death he shaved him self, made his own fire, chopped his own wood. He also knocked down a man who had suggested the appointment of a guardian for him, which brought on his first lawsuit, where he acted as his own counsel, earnestly defending himself against a charge of assault and battery.

He had never been out of the town of Saco—he was born there when it was named Scarborough—save on one occasion when he followed a horse thief into New Hampshire and caught him. He had never been on a railway train, and had never sent or received a telegram. All the improvements and inventions of the age were to him as if they had never been.

He was born in the last century—Dec. 21, 1777—one year after the foundation of the republic, and lived on the farm where he died for more than 50 consecutive years. He had never tasted liquor except at some patriotic celebration like February 22 or July 4, which he always observed, and he had never taken medicine until he had passed 100.

Although he had voted the democratic ticket since the formation of the party and for every presidential candidate, including Mr. Tilden, he had never been a candidate for any office; and once, when appointed by the Governor a justice of the peace, he promptly refused to serve. Mr. McKenney married when quite young, was a widower with three children at thirty and never remarried. At the time of his death he could reckon his grandchildren and great grandchildren by the dozens.—New York Times.
